Overview

This course introduces and applies Information Communication Technologies (ICT) and Building Information Modelling (BIM) in the construction management discipline. This course offers knowledge and skills essential for successful adoption of ICT and BIM in construction planning, construction cost management, design coordination and modelling. ICT and BIM competences are becoming core requirements for design and construction professionals; this course covers the challenges and case studies of the adoption of ICT and BIM in the construction industry. It is structured around lectures, laboratory tutorial sessions; and assessment is based on both individual and group work.
