Course

Global and First Nations Studies

ARTS5203 | 6 Units of Credit

Overview

The increasing pace of interactions in the global sphere prompt critical inquiries into human society and culture. How do we understand identity, time and place? What is the nature of power and how it is exercised? How do we learn from knowledges and experiences of first nations peoples? Our appreciation of these questions is enhanced by bringing together multifocal theoretical and methodological approaches drawing from historical, literary, subaltern, anthropological, and sociological disciplines. This specialisation will develop your skills in cross-cultural inquiry through engagement with multiple narratives and voices.
