Global Chronic Disease Prevention and Control

PHCM2009 | 6 Units of Credit

Overview

This course aims to enhance students’ understanding of the major chronic diseases, specifically cardiovascular disease, some cancers, type 2 diabetes, chronic lung disease and the interaction between their associated risk factors such as unhealthy diet, physical inactivity, tobacco use and alcohol use. Students will examine the concept of the epidemiological transition to provide insights into trends in the burden of chronic diseases in developed and developing countries. This course will help students to evaluate prevention and control approaches to chronic diseases, and to critique the modern social environment with respect to global health. Topics include: the global burden of disease, the epidemiological transition, risk factor control, obesity, and strategies to address chronic diseases.
