Overview

The Humanities Pathway Program is an enabling program that provides a pathway into academic study in Arts, Social Sciences and Law for Indigenous students with gaps in their knowledge or preparation for University. Indigenous students who are highly motivated to study in these areas will find this program attractive.

By undertaking the Humanities Pathway program, motivated students will have the opportunity to:

- strengthen their academic literacy and communication skills;
- develop their critical and analytical thinking;
- complete introductory courses in their chosen field and
- adjust to University study with a strong support structure.

Students who successfully complete the Law Plan will, in addition, develop foundational legal skills and knowledge and be exposed to a range of practical legal experiences which will equip them to undertake the Dual Law/Arts program.

Progression Requirements

The program provides for articulation to Arts and Social Sciences programs and combined Law/Arts and Social Sciences programs. On successful completion, students will be eligible for some advanced standing in completed courses that form parts of Arts and Social Sciences programs and combined Law/Arts and Social Sciences programs. If, on completion of requirements, a student gains admission to a degree program they would articulate with specified credit. A student who completes the program but does not wish to proceed to a degree program would be provided with a transcript showing courses undertaken.

For more information on university policy on progression requirements please visit Academic Progression.
Additional Information

Students must complete their enabling program within four semesters of study.

Student enrolments will be Commonwealth-funded and students will not have to pay Commonwealth Support charges.
Program Fees

At UNSW fees are generally charged at course level and therefore dependent upon individual enrolment and other factors such as student's residency status. For generic information on fees and additional expenses of UNSW programs, click on one of the following:
