Indigenous People and the Environment

ARTS2247  |  6 Units of Credit

Overview

Subject Area: Environmental Humanities
This course can also be studied in the following specialisation: Australian Studies

This course focuses on the complex intersection between Indigenous people and the natural environment. The course explores both Australian and international contexts, with two major case studies, where arguments are made for the preservation of cultural and natural diversity. The history of the concept of ‘nature’ is explored and various examples are given to illustrate the diversity of human/non-human relationships across different cultures. A second aim is the political economic analysis of specific sites of industrial-indigenous conflict where fundamental and often opposed values are negotiated. These two modes of analysis, cultural description and political economy, will help students to write future policy in these areas.
Faculty
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences

School
School of Humanities and Languages

Study Level
Undergraduate

Indicative contact hours
3

Timetable
Visit timetable website for details
Conditions for Enrolment

Prerequisite: 24 units of credit at Level 1
Additional Information

This course is offered as General Education.
Pre-2019 Handbook Editions

Access past handbook editions (2018 and prior) © UNSW Sydney (CRICOS Provider No.: 00098G), 2019. The information contained in this Handbook is indicative only. While every effort is made to keep this information up-to-date, the University reserves the right to discontinue or vary arrangements, programs and courses at any time without notice and at its discretion. While the University will try to avoid or minimise any inconvenience, changes may also be made to programs, courses and staff after enrolment. The University may also set limits on the number of students in a course.

Authorised by Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Academic)
CRICOS Provider Code 00098G
ABN: 57 195 873 179